

Toronto, September 29th, 2010

OntarioLearn.com annual registration tops 65,000

OntarioLearn.com, the Ontario Community College online collaborative's annual student registration has just exceeded 65,000. Started in 1995, OntarioLearn.com is a consortium of 22 Ontario Community Colleges servicing the rapidly growing market for online education.

OntarioLearn.com ranks as the largest provider of online courses in North America with over 1,300 college courses from which to select. Courses range from business, health, computer, human services, communication, and technology to recreation and leisure; from post secondary credit to general interest. In addition, the partnering colleges have all developed their own certificates and diplomas so that students can obtain these credentials on line from their home. There are over 50 certificates that are completely online including Human Resource Management, Home Inspection, Medical Transcription, Library and Information Technician, Microsoft Specialist and Leadership Development studies.

Online learning affords students the flexibility to take courses when they are still working, when they work shifts, when the courses are not available in their community and for those who like the line learning benefits of having more one to one time with their instructors and peers and completing their studies from the comfort of their home.

Our online students are supported by our technical partner, Embanet, 24 hours a day 7 days a week. Any technical issues are addressed immediately.

To learn more about ontariolearn.com go to our website or visit the website of your local college.

Contact info:

Alan Brady

Executive Director

OntarioLearn.com

abrady@ontariolearn.com

905 263 8677